O'LEARY'S COUNSEL REBUKED BY COURT FOR RACE QUERIES

Lawyer, Examining Talesman, Wanted to Know if Any Race or Society Is on Trial.

Counsel for John J. O'Leary, brother of the fugitive, Jeremiah O'Leary, under indictment for treason, got a rebuke from Judge Augustus Hand in the United States District Court to-day when he attempted to show that race prejudice might enter into the trial of his client on the charge of conspiring to effect the escape of his brother from the jurisdiction of the court.

Col. T. B. Felder, O'Leary's counsel, was examining Talesman Frederick G. Landenberger Jr. and, following his custom of yesterday, he was making exhaustive inquiry into the state of the talesman's feelings toward Irishmen. Judge Hand interposed that further questioning along this line was unnecessary.

"I want to find out," Col. Felder explained, "if any race or any society is on trial here."

Assistant District Attorney Earl Barnes was quick to deny that the Irish race was on trial.

"Certainly not," commented Judge Hand. "If the prosecutor attempted to put the Irish race on trial you must know, Col. Felder, that I would not permit it."

When court took a recess at noon twelve jurors were in the box. Two were excused for cause. One declared he was born in Germany and the other said he was born in Austria, though both were citizens of the United States.
